

Designing a Premium Progress Experience

A service-design guide for integrating body composition assessment into premium onboarding, coaching and review moments without making the technology the centre of the experience.

- | | |
|----|--|
| 01 | Onboard
Make the starting experience feel more personal. |
| 02 | Interpret
Turn measurement into a meaningful consultation. |
| 03 | Act
Connect the result to coaching, training or wellness. |
| 04 | Review
Create a scheduled reason to revisit progress. |

Use this as a working tool

This document is a campaign concept. It is designed to structure a practical operator conversation and identify what should be tested before a wider investment decision.

1. Choose the role of assessment

There is no single premium model. Decide what the assessment is there to do.

Model	How it works	Best suited to
Included benefit	Assessment included within premium membership	Differentiation and perceived value
Coaching gateway	Assessment leads into PT, nutrition or wellness	Service discovery and coaching conversations
Paid assessment	Assessment sold separately or as a package	Specialist or high-touch service models

2. Build the member journey

A premium experience should feel designed rather than bolted on.

- Welcome and explain why the assessment matters.
- Complete the baseline measurement.
- Interpret the result in plain language.
- Agree one or two relevant goals.
- Recommend the right training, coaching or wellness support.
- Schedule the next review before the member leaves.
- Use the review to show change and shape the next phase.

3. Service standards

Consistency matters more than complexity.

- Use a standard consultation structure.
- Define who can interpret results and when escalation is needed.
- Keep terminology member-friendly.
- Avoid overpromising outcomes.

-
- Make follow-up timing consistent.
-
- Capture member feedback after the first review.
-

4. What to measure

Use experience metrics alongside commercial metrics.

-
- Assessment utilisation
-
- Repeat assessment rate
-
- Consultation completion
-
- PT / coaching referrals
-
- Premium membership engagement
-
- Member satisfaction or NPS-style feedback
-
- Qualitative staff feedback
-
- Retention where the sample is large enough to interpret responsibly